In geometry, an apex (Latin for 'summit, peak, tip, top, extreme end') is the vertex which is in some sense the "highest" of the figure to which it belongs. The term is typically used to refer to the vertex opposite from some "base." Isosceles triangles. In an isosceles triangle, the apex is the vertex where the two sides of equal length meet, opposite the unequal third side.

Euclid proved the triangle inequality for distances in plane geometry using the construction in the figure. Beginning with triangle ABC, an isosceles triangle is constructed with one side taken as BC and the other equal leg BD along the extension of side AB. It then is argued that angle $\hat{B} > \hat{A}$, so side $AD > AC$. But $AD = AB + BD = AB + BC$ so the sum of sides $AB + BC > AC$.

There is debate as to the geometry used in the design of the Great Pyramid of Giza in Egypt. Built around 2560 BC, its once flat, smooth outer shell is gone and all that remains is the roughly-shaped inner core, so it is difficult to know with absolute certainty.

Can composition be learned? And if so, how? Over the next few posts Iâ€™m going to try and answer those questions. It seems to me that a good place to start might be to try to reach some conclusions on what makes a good composition, to try to divine some basic principles of composition that can be learned and practiced.
